

Is BAES right for you?

This programme might be a good fit if you:

- want a genuinely joint European degree, built and taught across several universities
- are curious about Europe's place in the world, from more than one academic angle
- like combining disciplines — political science, law, economics and beyond — rather than picking just one
- are ready to live and study in a shifting, international, multilingual student community
- can adapt to different teaching styles as you move between institutions

General information

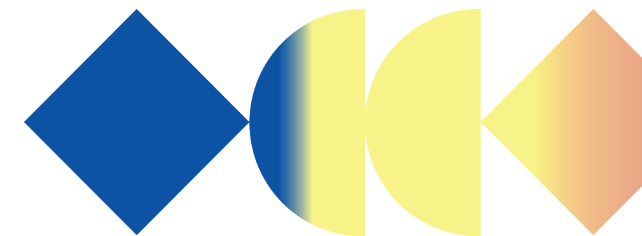

EUROPE IS MORE THAN A PLACE – IT'S A COMPLEX, EVOLVING IDEA.

The Bachelor in European Studies is a unique joint programme organised by 10 universities within the Una Europa alliance, inviting you to explore Europe from political, legal, economic, historical and philosophical perspectives.

You'll start at one of four degree-awarding universities — KU Leuven, Alma Mater Studiorum Università di Bologna, Universidad Complutense de Madrid, or Jagiellonian University in Kraków – then move on to at least one more university from across the alliance, choosing a major and a minor from: Law and Criminology; Politics and International Relations; Communication, Education, Gender and Sociology; Business, Economics and Philosophy; History; Languages and Culture.

Why BAES?

- Study in at least 2 countries, guaranteed.
- Graduate with one diploma, jointly awarded by 4 universities.
- Multilingual, multicultural cohort.
- Direct pathway into EU institutions, diplomacy, NGOs and international business.

Graduate Profile

BAES graduates leave with more than knowledge of Europe and its institutions — they leave with the transversal skills that come from living, studying and working across borders: adaptability, languages, and real cross-cultural teamwork. That combination opens doors at EU-focused organisations, national and subnational public services, consultancy and lobby groups, and international news and cultural institutions.
